Featured Photograph No. 1

Firehole Falls, Yellowstone National Park

It's now officially winter in the U.S., and many of us have been experiencing winter weather for some time now. Although people tolerate winter weather differently, most agree that winter scenes are beautiful.

This month I've featured two winter scenes from the southwestern part of Yellowstone National Park ("Yellowstone"). You're viewing these photographs for the first time and I'm just now also displaying them on my Website.

Firehole River and Falls is a popular destination in Yellowstone. The easiest way to view the river and falls is to drive the Firehole Canyon Drive just south of Madison Junction.

Firehole River starts at Madison Lake on the Continental Divide and flows north for 21 miles where it connects with the Gibbon River to form the Madison River. It was so named by early trappers and visitors to the Yellowstone area because of the steam coming off the river appearing to be smoke, as if it was on fire. Firehole River flows through several geyser basins including the Upper Geyser Basin, which contains the famous Old Faithful. It's surrounded by geothermal activity, which empties water into it. This results in the water being abnormally warm and producing steam, particularly when the air is cooler.

The river is popular among serious fly fishermen. Although famous for its uniqueness and pristine beauty, it's also famous for its healthy brown, brook and rainbow trout.

Firehole Falls has a drop of approximately 40 ft. and is located about a half-mile from where the river joins the Gibbon River.

Firehole River and Falls should be on everyone's list when they visit Yellowstone.
