Featured Photograph No. 2

"Serenity" - Cape Kiwanda, Pacific City, Oregon

The Waves and Cliffs of Cape Kiwanda

I recently spent time at Cape Kiwanda State Natural Area ("Cape Kiwanda"), Oregon. I had visited there before, but the poor weather prohibited getting good photographs.

Cape Kiwanda is part of the Three Capes Scenic Route, which starts about 11 miles south of Tillamook, Oregon. Cape Kiwanda is at Pacific City, Oregon. Cape Lookout lies just to the north and Cape Meares to the south.

The brilliant sandstone cliffs, sand dunes and one of the best beaches in Oregon to experience magnificent wave action makes Cape Kiwanda unusual and a special beach. The beach has much beauty, with views of Haystack Rock (formerly named Chief Kiwanda Rock), side views of the Cape, spectacular waves and a massive sand dune. It's also a popular area to see surfers and windsurfers. To really appreciate this wonderful area, and to experience amazing waves crashing against the huge sandstone cliffs one must do some hiking. Hiking to the top of the largest dune provides good views, but is quite strenuous, and not necessary to still obtain some of the best views of the cape. It's fairly easy to hike up a smaller part of the sand dune allowing exploration and views of many gorgeous and interesting parts of the cape.

A special point of interest is the Pelican Pub and Brewery, directly adjacent to the parking lot at Cape Kiwanda. Grab some of your favorite food and/or beverage after hiking the cape, or just watch the sunset from their deck.
