I seldom have 3 Monthly Newsletters this close together featuring the same area, but I just had to make an exception. I simply felt obligated to publish one more part relating to “Autumn in Colorado”. Please keep in mind that Colorado is a huge state with so many beautiful places, and therefore, 3 newsletters relating to Colorado’s autumn really just scratches the surface.

In this Part 3 issue, I feature more beautiful landscapes from around Ouray,

CO, in the San Juan Mountains.

Autumn In Colorado, Part 1

Autumn In Colorado, Part 2

I mentioned last month that there are miles and miles of trails in the San Juan Mountains where you'll need a 4-wheel drive vehicle to navigate. I rented a jeep for 3 days and Featured Photograph No. 2 of Animas Forks River was shot while traveling one of these trails.

West of the town of Ridgway, CO is a back-country gravel road that heads south appox. 14 miles to Telluride, CO. This is one of the most scenic roads in the area and travels through the San Juan National Forest, beautiful ranch-land, thick aspen groves and amazing views of Mt. Sneffels, Wilson Peak and Mount Wilson. Both Featured Photographs No. 1 and 3 were captured along this amazingly gorgeous drive.

Until my next Newsletter, stay warm and think spring.
