LYNX WITH KITTEN

Once again, I'm honored that Featured Photograph No. 1 above, was chosen by the North American Nature Photography Association ("NANPA") as one of the winners in their 2018 annual Showcase Competition. All winning images appeared in NANPA's February 2019 publication of "Expressions". Images entered in this competition come from hundreds of photographers and thousands of photographs.

Both photographs of the "Lynx with Kitten" were shot in Denali National Park, Alaska with a 400mm Lens and a 1.7 teleconverter. I found them resting comfortably under a spruce tree and the kitten could hardly keep his or her eyes open. Fortunately, they remained fairly still. Mother and Kitten slowly walked away shortly after Featured Photograph No. 2 was shot. There are four species of Lynx. The only species in North America, including Alaska, is the Canadian Lynx.

The Lynx is a solitary cat that avoids humans, generally hunts at night and is rarely seen. Spotting them like this and being able to view them like I did for quite some time was amazing. I was not only fortunate; I was downright lucky.
